

- Office Technology
  - Excel Training
  - Keyboard Shortcuts
  - Microsoft Email Outlook
  - Microsoft Office Training
  - Office software
  - PowerPoint Tricks
  - Web Tools
  - Word Tips
- Small Business Tax
  - Small Business Tax Deduction Strategies
- Workplace Communication
  - Business Etiquette
  - Career Management
  - Office Communication
  - Office Politics
  - Salary Negotiating
  - Workplace Conflict
- Videos
  - Admins
  - Human Resources
  - Leadership
  - Office Management
  - Office Technology
- Blogs
  - Admin Pro Forum
  - Are Your Employees Engaged?
  - Case In Point
  - HR Soapbox
  - The Office Tech Pro
  - The Savvy Office Manager
  - Remarkable Leadership with Kevin
  - Your Office Coach
- Newsletters
- Training
- Free E-Letters
- Store

5 reasons communication fails

by BMD Editors on March 11, 2015 7:00am
in Centerpiece, Office Communication, Workplace Communication

When communication breaks down in the workplace, everything—from morale to performance—suffers. As a leader, you play a central role in keeping the lines of communication open. Avoid these pitfalls:

1. Choosing generic language. Especially when it comes to providing feedback and instructions, you need to be specific and direct. Tell people exactly what they need to do to improve, and describe specifically what they did to warrant any praise.

2. Lecturing. If during meetings you are the only one talking, you aren't benefiting from the feedback and ideas of your employees. Brainstorm with employees, elicit their feedback and collaborate often to find solutions to problems.

3. Fostering distrust. If you lie, hide information, cover up issues, make excuses or point fingers at others when things go wrong, people won't trust you. Furthermore, you'll encourage that behavior in others. Be as transparent as possible.

4. Failing to be tactful. When you say whatever is on your mind, lash out at employees and use offensive words, people tune you out. Worse, they become angry and stop working hard. Always maintain your cool, use tactful language and be diplomatic.

5. Relying only on what's said. Employees aren't always going to have the courage to correct you, shoot down an idea or complain. You need to first empathize with employees and understand their viewpoints so that you can anticipate their concerns. Also, monitor morale and step in quickly to fix problems.

— Adapted from “9 Reasons Communication Fails,” Dianna Booher, Fast Company.

Related Articles...

- Supreme Court: No pay for security screening time
- 4 ways to nurture your network
- Never Say These Phrases
- Audience feedback tip
- Help new employees blend into the team

Leave a Comment

Name *

E-mail *

Notify me of followup comments via e-mail

Sign up for our weekly roundup of the week's most popular articles, events, and advice.

